Profile

Hi, my name is Rahil.
I am currently a Senior UI Designer working at a company involved in the education sector. I previously worked for Develearn Technologies and was a freelancer before that tenure.

My main role has been to create effective designs that meet the nature and demand of the purpose in hand, creating something specific and unique. Out of the box thinking and execution are an essential part of my process which translates into a work that cannot be replicated.

I have designed ERP products and their respective websites. I have created responsive web designs for many regional colleges, translating decade old pages and bringing them into the modern age. I have designed systems that manage content for administrators and have built several portfolio websites.

In my free time, I... well, I actually do a lot of stuff. From developing video games to making music, from directing/writing short films to writing e-books, from coding personal websites to occasional podcasts and more. The breadth of the stuff I have made is vast and can be overwhelming, if you want to see it all visit RAHIL CITY.

If you have something exciting in mind for me, feel free to email me.
If all looks good, I will also send you a proper resume, the one you are currently reading is meant only for public display.
